

Libby is the founder and CEO of ffunnel.com, a social media site that enables users to like and follow the public calendars of any organization that is important to their lives. Her idea for this website came after her role as director of AIA San Diego required her to schedule events that did not compete with other events in the design build space and realizing there was no one single source for the information. She is also the co-founder of www.musterme.com, a phone app that enables users at any event to share their contact information instantly with all members of the group through a simple text message. MusterMe was born out of a StartUp weekend in Fredericksburg in 2013 and was the recipient of a $10,000 award at the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce blah blah. As a champion of the start up community in Fredericksburg, Virginia, Libby also sits on the Board of Directors of FredXchange, an organization dedicated to establishing a thriving entrepreneurial ecosystem in the local area. You can find Libby at open coffee at the Center for.adfhdklfalk every Friday morning.

When she is not building her own company, Libby enjoys spending time with her adopted daughter Morgan,
